

Selection Research to recruit 60 workers for Saudi Arabia

By BEN EUBANKS

Selection Research International Inc., which screens and evaluates workers for companies sending workers overseas, has been chosen to recruit as many as 60 persons for work in Saudi Arabia.

Barry Kozloff, 37, president of Selection Research, said his company would the old downtown sector, which includes the governor of the city's residence and judicial buildings; and the renovation of the Riyadh Old Airport into a recreational park similar to Forest Park, Kozloff said.

Selection Research will be the exclusive recruiter for the United States, but will be competing against other not be making a final hiring determination on the employees but would do technical and suitability screening and send recommendations to Riyadh Development Authority, a government agency responsible for the planning of the Saudi capital.

"We will be recruiting senior personnel for work in Riyadh," Kozloff said. Positions being recruited are in various fields of urban planning such as architecture, engineering and urban planning.

The Riyadh Development Authority is involved in such projects as the development of the Diplomatic Quarter, for the relocation of embassies from Jeddah to Riyadh; the redevelopment of recruiters in Europe and Australia.

"The preference is for Americans, especially in architecture and engineering because of their technical knowledge," Kozloff said.

Selection Research is a three-year-old firm which has screened employees being considered for overseas jobs for such firms as Emerson Electric and The Boeing Co. It screens and evaluates employees' adaptability to the country.

Kozloff said his firm will receive a commission from Riyadh Development Authority of 12 percent of the salary of each person selected for employment.

The recruiting should be completed by the end of summer, Kozloff said.
